

Public schools in Texas are held responsible for student performance under a rigorous accountability system that has incorporated increasingly higher expectations for schools since its introduction in 1993. Ratings are largely based on performance on the state assessment (Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills), administered in grades 3-11. The TAKS measures knowledge of the state curriculum and academic skills. Other indicators in the system are dropout and completion rates. To learn more, visit tea.state.tx.us.
