

Be the first to know about the latest tool to help students and parents prepare for college and beyond - the new Martin High School GO Center!

What is a GO Center?

GO Centers help spread the word about college and career opportunities, create and promote a college-going culture and encourage students to consider higher education after graduation. By providing the necessary resources, information and man-power, GO Centers are able to help students and parents better prepare and plan for college. They serve as a point of coordination between students, counselors, and institutions of higher education.

Who can go to a GO Center?

Anyone! The GO Center is primarily intended for high school students, but each GO Center is equipped with information to also help parents, current college students or even community members interested in higher education. Students at all grade levels can learn about careers and college preparation and receive assistance in this process from trained G-Force members. Parents can learn about financial aid, how to prepare their child for college, and the tools available for their children.

What is the G-Force?

G-Force is a network of students/volunteers committed to building a college-going culture. The Martin High School GO Center will mainly utilize students from surrounding colleges to serve as G-Force peer educators. The encouragement and assistance provided by G-Force members is instrumental in motivating students to pursue and explore all the available options for enrolling in college and to help prepare them academically and financially, so that they successfully complete their college and career goals.
