

Degree Days are the energy -industry standard used to measure the impact of weather on energy usage. One degree day is accounted for when the temperature measured at our Central Arlington weather station is 1 degree off of 65 degrees in either direction.